GEOPATHIC STRESS OCCURS when the earth's natural radiation becomes distorted by weak electromagnetic fields. This can be caused by underground water, mineral deposits or even by quarrying, which can create an imbalance in the energy underneath. The earth itself is also covered in a grid of energy lines that can affect a house.

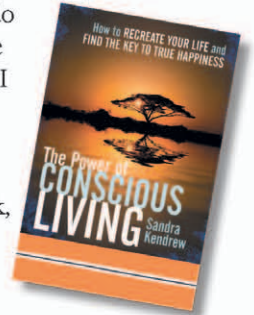

Apart from geopathic stress, a home can also be affected by what I class as geopsychic stress, which can be from the negative influence of other occupants in the building or even from past occupants. This is because we impress our energy upon a property, so a house will have a memory of the others who have lived in it before. This is something we all naturally tune into, as we can feel the energy of a house the moment we walk into it – we either love being there or we can't wait to escape.

When we live in a home with geopathic stress or geopsychic energy we can be affected, especially if we sleep in this energy. Often we can sense that the energy is non beneficial in one of the rooms in the house.

When someone contacts me with concerns about geopathic stress I first check if the imbalance is coming from the occupants, or if it is from the actual house. I do this with dowsing and then I use distant healing to help balance the energies in the home. Afterwards I send them a report, which outlines everything I have found and what they can do to help maintain the healing. Ultimately, I help people to take responsibility for their own health, outlined in my book, 'The Power of Conscious Living'.
